COURTNEY CURB CHILDRESS

You can tell a lot about a man by the way he treats animals. In the Curb household, it was her parents' compassion that left the biggest impression on their youngest daughter, Courtney.

"My sister and I were not sure about the move to Nashville, but Dad finally convinced us by promising to bring our two dogs and two horses with the promise of more animal additions in the future," Courtney says. "We even snuck a frog in an aquarium onto the plane, as well as a cockatiel that chirped through the whole flight from LA."

But it was the horses – feeding them in the cold at 6:30 in the morning – that began to drive home some life lessons for the girls.

"We had grown up in LA, where we didn't have 20-degree mornings, so that was a bit of a shock to the system," says Courtney. "But it was important to our parents that we learned about responsibility, and that we shared their love for caring for animals."

The Curb ranch in Thousand Oaks, California, had been a weekend getaway, and the girls were able to ride horses, feed the sheep and goats, raise baby ducklings and play with the rescue dogs.

Shortly after the move to Nashville, the Curb's two dogs turned into six, and the family home has continued to serve as a shelter for rescue dogs and fosters for which Courtney finds new homes.

When Courtney graduated from college and married, she and her husband, Taylor, moved to San Antonio. Mike and Linda loved to visit, and one day announced that they'd stopped by the local humane society and decided to help them build a new facility that included an educational center so kids could learn how to care for animals.

“It was important to our parents that we learned about responsibility, and that we shared their love for caring for animals.”

"It was such an honor that Dad would do that for me," Courtney says. "He knew how much it would mean to the animals, to the shelter that always struggles with funding, and to me."

Courtney and Taylor have lived and worked in Daytona Beach, Florida and San Antonio, Texas. They now live in Nashville. She directs human resources for Curb Records and participates with dog placement as a national trustee for the American Lab Rescue organization.

And, true to form, Mike Curb found an opportunity to get involved with Daytona State College, where Taylor worked in institutional relations. The Curb College of Arts, Music and Science was established at Daytona State in 2010.

"He sees opportunities where he can make a difference, and he comes up with these ideas that really maximize the benefit," Courtney says of her dad. "I think he just enjoys helping people. He's one of the most compassionate and understanding men I've ever known."

Rabin, Ford to Attend Salute to Mike Curb

The former heads of two of the most important nations in the free world will be reunited when the Jewish National Fund welcomes Gerald R. Ford and Yitzhak Rabin to the gala Salute to Mike Curb being held on June 18.

Ford and Rabin were in constant communication when they both served as heads of their respective governments during the middle 1970s. Now Ford is general chairman and guest speaker at the Curb testimonial, at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. Dinner. Chairman

YITZHAK RABIN

Theodore E. Cummings announced recently that Prime Minister Rabin will fly to Los Angeles to deliver a special, diplomatic message relating to the establishment of the Mike Curb Nachlah in Israel.

A native of Jerusalem, Rabin entered his country's service while he was still a teenager. He was a soldier in Israel's defense force for 27 years, retiring with the supreme rank of Chief of the General Staff shortly after the 1967 Six Day War. He was Ambassador to the U.S. for five years before joining Golda Meir's cabinet as Minister of Labor in 1973.

When she retired, he became Prime Minister, and served in that post until the election of the current government. He is now a member of the Knesset.

"The JNF is honored that a man of Rabin's rank has chosen to help us pay tribute to California's Lt. Governor for his support for Israel," said JNF Los Angeles Council President Abraham Spiegel. JNF Western Exec. V.P. Fred Kahan added, "We are also pleased to be uniting Mr. Rabin with his friend and colleague, President Ford."
